Biodification of General Fremont. The fourth section of the act to confiscate property used for insurrectionary purposes, which is the section intended by the President to give construction to the proclamation of General Fremont, provides that, Whenever hereafter, during the present insurrection against the Government of the United States, any person claimed to be held to labor or service under the law of any State, shall be required or permitted by the person to whom such labor or service is claimed to be due, or by the lawful agent of such person, to take up arms against the United States; or to work or be employed in or upon any fort, navy-yard, dock, armory, ship, entrenchment, or in any military or naval service whatever, against the Government and lawful authority of the United States, then and in every such case, the person to whom such labor or service is claimed to be due, shall forfeit his claim to such labor, any law of the State or of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding."

something: and it will not be unreasonable to look soon for further developments.

The difference between the proclamation and the law by which it is to be amended consists in confining the forfeiture to those slaves that have actually been employed in carrying on operations against the Govern-

The Gazette on Misrepresentations. The Gazette charges us, in our articles reviewing its essay upon the "Belligerent Rights of the People," with having misstated its position, and based our argument upon our own misstatements. This we certainly do not desire to do. Had we thought its position tenable, we should not have attacked it. The paraphrase which we made of its leading proposition was for the sake of brevity and convenience, not to change its value, in any respect. The Gazette said :

"There is no such thing as liberty of speech or press to oppose the defense of the country against a foreign invasion, or against an offensive war, or to oppose the suppression of an insurrection, or to oppose the Government in a civil war."

In one of our articles we gave the exact words of the Gazette. In another, we gave their substance, as follows :

"There is no such thing as liberty of speech or press to oppose—that is to say express opinions against—the acts or policy of the Government in time of war."

Opposition by speech or press must be through the expression of opinions; the Government in respect to a war must be examined either in the light of its policy or its acts; and to oppose the defense of the country is, when, as in our case, when the Government assumes the defense, to oppose the Government. We did not, like the Gazette enumerate all the kinds of defensive war: but in our argument we did not once ignore the fact that the war we are engaged in is one of defeuse. We can not but feel that the charges of the Gazette are captious, and ought to be retracted. Under its flings as to our ignorance of our native tongue, we feel easy; for we do not deem it probable that any friend of ours will advise us to lay down what we know, and go to the Gazette to be freshly

General Fremont and the President. The disapproval by the Government of the position taken by General Fremont, in respect to slaves of the rebels, has created a breach between it and that officer, which the journals in his interest seem to make as wide as possible. The reasons which may have controlled the action of the Government do not seem worthy of being inquired after. It is assumed that the course of General Fremont is the best one to suppress the rebellion, and, therefore, that whatever to be denounced. By placing himself upon ground selected by Congress, Mr. Lincoln has put himself right-if it is right for a President to hold himself amenable to the laws of the land. In a matter in which Congress has so recently acted, it would not seem advisable for the President, without very strong and urgent reasons, to overstep the boundaries which, we are bound to believe with all due deliberation, it has prescribed; and between doing it, and permitting it to be done, there is no difference. The letter of the President places it beyoud doubt that in this part of his proclamation, at least, General Fremont acted without authority from Government-not having the warrant either of the law or the Administration. Such being the case, what will he do? Will he resign, as a high regard for official etiquette would dictate; or will be retain his place, and rely upon the moral, and if necessary, the physical florce of his party to sustain him in it? The tone of several of the Republican journals would seem to indicate the latter; in which case it will be necessary, perhaps, for the Administration to direct a trial of General Fremont upon charges of misconduct that have been made against bim. The condition is a bal one for the Government either way: If it should take any measures to get rid of General Fremont and the condition is a ball one for the Government either way: If it should take any measures to get rid of Gene-ral Fremont now, the public will place that officer at once in the category of a hero and a martyr; if, on the other hand, it should let him alone, it may run the risk of falling into the estate of a martyr, if not

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, September 11, 1861. "The cry is still they come." If numbers tell, then our chances are good. Frederick declared. I believe that the Lord, as a general thing, favored the heaviest regiments. We have Carlisle's authority at least, that Frederick was a judge in such matters. So far, no doubt well, but the "breaking in" of Frederick was a judge in such matters. So far, no doubt well, but the "breaking in" of our men and horses, mules and muliteers, by thousands, is considerable of a business. The Union cavalry would have failed at Balaklava. Excepting some few United States Dragoons, a more worthless (I must say it) collection of men, or rather boys, and horses, I never saw—verdant as the pastures they must have recently left. This branch of the service should be highly prized by young men of spirit and pluck, and the Bouthrons rush into it with zeal and confidence. They are fine riders with fine horses—not the $125 nags scraped up from all the kennels of the West. An immense expense, it is feared, will have no counterbalancing good—they may do to guard a baggage train if it is never attacked.

The majority of the troops are yet quite green. Officers are too often in the same condition. To get into the city, notwithstanding all that has been said, seems to be the hight of their ambition. As to any paternal care over their commands, a personal inspection of the supplies selden.

paternal care over their commands, a personal inspection of the supplies seldom or ever are they thought of. Too ofter the men are treated with shameful severity. Colonel Gordon, of one of the Massachusetts Regiments, had a soldier tied up to a tree by his thumbs, his feet just resting on the ground, three mornings in succession. This was the second brutal correction for some trivial offense, which a kind word spoken in

From might have rendered unnecessary.

How often the question is asked, "Is an engagement imminent?" Why, certainly, at any hour. General McClellan's policy is to avoid any collision until ready to strike home a blow that will settle the question. The defeat of the army in Virginia he re-gards as a virtual defeat of the rebellion, and hence that no power of the Government should be wanting to make the army here complete in every respect. For this he steadily labors. It is not his policy then to attack, but to be armed at all points to re-sist any movement of the enemy from what-ever point it may come. When thus pre-parted he can advance. If disaster should come, the Capital would still be safe—the reserve so strong as to act on the offensive, even if necessary. In a word, that defeat, under any circumstances, would not compromise the cause. Remember, the troops aro mainly, almost altogether, untried. The skillful general trusts nothing to chance that oresight can prevent.

Jeff. Davis is, no doubt, shrewd enough to surmise all this. Every day was and is literally a loss—the earliest advance the safest advance for him. The fates, however, were not propitious. In the first place, the river, generally a shallow stream at this season, has been flood-high. More fatal still has been the camp diseases which even now fill every available hospital at his command The advices this myrning, both public and private, leave no doubt of this. Some regiments are mere skeletons of commands—one-half, and often more, on the sick list, Small pox and camp measles have been frightful in their ravages. Every town of any size has its hospitals—even North Caro-lina receives its quota of the sick. Wherever railroads go hospital cars may be found-a and picture truly, as though the bayonet and gunpowder could not claim its victims inst

Yet, after all, there is no hour some movement may not be anticipated. Supplies are so scarce, an advance by the rebels seems unavoidable. McClellan, therefore, steadily avoidable. McClellan, therefore, steadily advances his field-works—takes a balloonairing to note his neighbor's positions; throws out a regiment when they are disposed to be too familiar, and occasionally warms them up with a few shells, just to keep up a visiting acquaintance.

The rebels don't understond, as reported, his object in not being drawn into their ambuscades, which, after all, are the steady re-liance of their great captain. Every effort has been made to induce McClellan to ad-vance, but they should understand that the game of spies, at which they are so expert, can be practiced quite as well by others. The whole country from the bank of the Potomac to the Manassas Junction has been industrionsly worked, and all sorts of earthworks. pits and ambuscades, made for the entertain-ment of their former friends. This is kind, to be sure, but McClellan is not appreciative of Southern liberality.

Southern liberality.

As I closed the preceding paragraph, my ear caught the heavy boom of distant artillery. On the top of the house a pretty good view of the Virginia shore can be had for many miles. The firing was heavy. Far and near on the housetops were grouped anxious spectators. To the South, near the location of the Ohio camp, dense columns of smoke arose—but gun practice and brush burning were the sole disturbing causes. As one after another dropped down the hatch ways after another dropped down the hatch ways it was evident the battle was not yet, but then this is "a specimen brick" of the daily excitements. There is a constant and steady undercurrent of Secession feeling here, which a reverse to our arms would kindle into a flame. The yearly visitor to the Capital knows well the cause. There are many citizens in the District who have made "their pile" from Government contracts. An ambition to move in the first society was much like that or the moth in the gas-light. Decayed families in Virginia sent their young calets here ready for any marital contract backed by the requisite "tin." Thus you find so many families with Southern connections. Baltimore has shared largely in the same in-teresting relations. Indeed, wherever impudence, with a requisite outfit from some confiding tailor, could make its way, they were always on hand, ready for the sacrifice.

There was a hurrying to and fro at Willard's this evening—the greatest excitement since the Bull Run adventure. The crowd was almost impenetrable—"two batteries taken and three completely demolished rebels giving away at all points—fight to be renewed in the morning." This was report No. 1, varied by each successive narrator. As McClellen had been at Fort Corcoran inspecting batteries, and the salute mentioned above had been in his honor, I knew well enough this was a pure fiction. How they get currency surpasses my comprehen-sion. The crowd was wild with excitement. Passing along to official quarters, I learned quite a free fight had taken piace op-posite the Chain Bridge, which your readers may have forgotten ere this. It was, how-ever, quite a spirited little action, and our is interposed in its way is wrong and ought troops faced the music with a will that augurs well for the future.

The rebel troops are now mainly posted between Fairfax Court-house and Leesburg. No doubt Davis has collected here all his avilable troops—the largest in number he can ever hope to see together again. Of course there is great uncertainty as to exact numbers. So constantly on the move has he kept the regiments it is difficult to ascertain the active force at his disposal. If his object, as it must be is to draw McClellan out has as it must be, is to draw McClellan out, he must wait some time. There is no one who believes that Beauregard will meet the Union troops on any equal terms—military traps seem to be the hight of his ambition. Your readers must wait patiently for "ulterior measures."

HAMILTON.

ANOTHER INFAMOUS OUTRAGE AT ELIZA RETHTOWN.—We are informed that the freight train going South over the Louisville and Nashville Railroad yesterday was detained beyond its usual time by Blanton Duncan. James G. Gorsuch, John D. Pope, Mitchell La Peille, Phil. Victor, and a party of sixty or seventy Secessionists, who compelled the engineer and conductor to remain long engineer and conductor to remain long enough to ship sixty guns from that point for the Southern Confederacy. These guns were the same that had been taken from this city by Captain Gorsuch. They had been selred at Elizabethtown, it appears, by order of Major A. L. Symmes, and placed in the jail tor safe keeping, but Duncan, Gorsuch, and party broke open the jail yesterday, took possession of the arms and shiped them to Camp Boone. The officers of the train, it is said, were coerced into measures, the outis said, were coerced into measures, the out-laws who stole the gues compelling them to accede to their demands at the muzzle of the pistol.—Lewisville Journal, 16th.

Sr. Louis, September 16.-Among the killed by the Little Platte disaster was Barcley Coppic, of the John Brown raid no toricty, together with five or six men with him, en route to join Montgomery's Kansas regiment.

CHICAGO, September 16 .- The Tribune of this morning contains a severe article on President Lincoln's letter to Fremont, say-ing it takes away the penalty of rebellion, and leaves the war a mere scheme for mutual letter, saying that it will have a bad effect in ori, and that backward steps now will lead to no good result. Leavenworth papers of the 11th give the ollowing account of the late engagement between Rains and Montgomery:

the impression seemed to be very general at Liverpool that passengers to or from the United States are required to be cautioned at the present juncture against any ready expression of opinion on the civil war. The policy of working a short time as a precaution against the contingencies of the cotton supply, and of the glutted state of a distant market for manufactured goods con-tinued to make progress in Lancashire. The Times, in an editorial on the present aspect of American affairs, argues that enough has transpired to show that the subjugation of the South is next to impossible, and sub-mission in the highest degree improbable, all the incidents of the war thus far having been favorable to the South. It says the establishment of passports, the suspension of the habeas corpus and other kindred measures, all of which are unavoidable, make iravelers and themselves more at liberty in Venice than in New York.

The Times doubts much whether the Americans, after the war is ended, will re-turn to the old form of Government; thinks there must be two Governments; that they will be less democratic, and that the North bears a resemblance to the last Republic.

It was reported that Austria and Spain had addressed a note expressing their intention, in the event of the French troops being withdrawn from Rome, to each place some regiments at the disposal of the Papal Gov-ernment.
